Bayard Rustin:

Bayard Rustin was a close friend and advisor to Martin Luther King Jr. and organiser of the 1963 March on Washington. As he was an openly gay man, he did not receive wide recognition for his role in the civil rights movement at the time. Bayard's sexuality was used against him by opposing parties, who threatened to spread lies about his relationship with Martin Luther King Jr. This forced him to work in the shadows to prevent further controversy for the pair. Despite this, Bayard remained a political and gay activist, working to bring the AIDS crisis to the NAACP's (National Association for the Advancement of Coloured People) attention.
